(Fletcher's Reply)

April 4, 1935

San Diego Chamber of Commerce
San Diego, California.
Gentlemen:

Your amazing, dictatorial telegram of April 2nd received.

If my work is not satisfactory, I shall welcome a recall at any time.

I supported Senate Bill No. 38 for it only declares a policy of placing the unemployed at work producing commodities principally for their own consumption in the expenditure of available unemployment relief funds and for a limited two year period. My firm conviction is that by so doing business interests will be relieved of an ever increasing burden of taxation and debt necessary to maintain in idleness the hundreds of thousands of unemployable and unemployed persons in this state and for the support of practically one-fifth of our population.

The present policy cannot be continued without bankruptcy. Over 200 million will be required in this state for direct relief during the next year, of which over 100 million must be furnished by the state unless some other means of meeting the problem is found.

Why not give a chance to the Co-operatives who are willing to work? The experiment is worth trying.

I have not read, neither has anyone spoken to me about an Anti-Injunction bill.

Regarding the 30 hour week bill, the Republican and Democratic platforms favored it and it applies now in all federal work. My reasons for favoring it are as follows:

Business interests should realize their responsibility in the face of conditions obtaining in this state. Unless a way is found to meet the problem presented by those conditions, there will be no business interests left.

You must think of the increased demand and consumption of the products of private industry that increased employment will bring about. The wide-spread unemployment now existing may continue indefinitely unless there is a creation of demand for increased production. That demand can come only thru general employment, expenditure and consumption of goods. The bill as amended is in effect only until August, 1937.

In considering legislation to which your telegram refers, the broader reasons should be considered from the standpoint of private business interests as well as the public interest.

My purpose and vote on all measures has been, and will continue to be, guided by that point of view.

Very sincerely yours,
Ed Fletcher

P. S. I expect to be in San Diego next Friday, April 12th, and if you desire to have a public meeting at 2 p. m. on that day in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, to discuss and receive suggestions on matters pertaining to legislation, it will be a pleasure for me to be there. Please wire reply.

Popular Local Girl Married at La Jolla

Miss Marie Elizabeth Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Moore of 4775 Narragansett avenue, Ocean Beach, became the bride of Patrick MacDowall Hannay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter MacDowall Hannay, in the Hannay home at La Jolla, at 8 p. m., Friday, April 5.

Forty-five relatives and close friends of the couple and the immediate families witnessed the ceremony with the Rev. Francis Eric Bloy of St. James-by-the-Sea officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

An altar improvised over the large fireplace was decorated with spring flowers. A large wedding bell fashioned of white sweetpeas and carnations hung above the mantel with streamers of smilax and sweetpeas reaching to baskets of gladioli and larkspur on each side of the altar.

Mrs. Bertram Moore, cousin of the bride, played the wedding marches and accompanied Owen Fuller, tenor, who sang "At Dawning", "Oh, Promise Me", "I Love You Truly", and "Because".

The bride wore a wedding gown of white satin, entrain, with lace insertions about the neck and a row of tiny white satin buttons running down the back to the waistline. The sleeves were full to the elbow and tight down to the wrists ending in a point over the hands. The cap of the long tulle and lace veil had a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias, rapture roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Winifred Kenline, maid of honor, wore pale blue satin with contrasting blue velvet jacket designed with tiny cape sleeves and a matching blue turban. She carried blue delphinium and yellow daffodils.

Mrs. Charles Moore, mother of the bride, wore a sheer crepe dress of old rose color with lace jabot while Mrs. Peter Hannay, mother of the groom, chose grey silk crepe with appliqued designs on grey chiffon. Both wore corsages of gardenias and sweetpeas.

Lt. (jg) Ralph W. Elden, U. S. N., served as best man.

The bride is a graduate of Point Loma high school and the San Diego Business college. She is a native of this section, her parents having been residents of Point Loma and Ocean Beach for twenty-six years. Mr. Hannay is a graduate of the San Diego Army and Navy Academy, attended the California Institute of Technology for two years and received his B. S. degree upon graduation from the University of Southern California last June. He is an alumnus of Kappa Alpha fraternity and is associated with the office of the Union Oil company in Santa Fe Springs. The young couple have taken an apartment in Montebello Park, Los Angeles.

The many local friends and acquaintances of the newlyweds join in wishing them a long and joyous maried life.

Business Brisk In Ocean Beach Stores

Business was good in Ocean Beach last week end and merchants generally pretty busy taking care of their customers. The first of the week rainy weather slowed up trading somewhat, however, expectancy for the summer months is very good.

The Ocean Beach community radio broadcast is making local people more loyal to the home merchants, and we are sure the more advertising our local business houses do, the more they invite customers into their store, the more trading center we shall build.

Listen in, and have your friends tune in to XEMO Friday afternoons from 3 to 3:30 p m.

Then remember the following sponsors when you do your buying every day: Silver Spray Apt. Hotel and Plunge, Fried's Department Store, Strand Radio Co., Sunset Cliffs Service Station and Garage, Ocean Beach Cleaners, Elenia's Beauty Shop, Hotel Ocean Village, Richley Hardware and Kraft's Drug store.

These businesses have the very best interest of Ocean Beach at heart. They are willing to spend their money to interest outsiders in our community, therefore it is your duty to give them what business you can.

POINT LOMA DRUGGIST KILLED IN AIRPLANE ACCIDENT

Walter L. Lake, proprietor of the Point Loma Pharmacy at Point Loma business section, was killed Sunday in a plane crash, over San Diego bay, west of Chula Vista. Ershel B. Staggs, with Lake, in the airplane, also died when their craft crashed into the water from a low altitude.

Rescuers worked frantically to release the men but the job was a difficult one and when it was found they could not be rescued from where the plane crashed, it was towed a mile to a pier in Chula Vista and police and firemen worked until early Monday morning before the bodies were taken from the wreckage.

Roy Lake, a brother, who has been associated in the Point Loma Drug store, it is reported, will continue the business.

LOCAL PEOPLE MOTORING TO NASHVILLE, TENN.

Supervisor Ed Hastings accompanied by Mrs. Hastings, Mrs. Harry P. Sweet and Frank G. Forward, left last week for Nashville, Tenn, with a motorcade party of San Diegans who are to attend the national convention of the Broadway of America at Nashville. Ed is sent as a representative of San Diego county.

Reports Tuesday evening from Hot Springs, Arkansas, said the party was badly shaken up when their car skidded on wet pavement, however, word received from them was to the effect that no one was injured in the near accident.

Re-Survey Shore Lines May Be Requested

Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce Monday evening carried out routine business, several letters were read from Senator Ed Fletcher regarding local and county affairs that had been given his consideration.

A letter from the San Diego County Planning Commission regarding routing of sight-seeing busses during the Exposition was given attention a route to Point Loma's Old Spanish light house, Sunset Cliffs Park and the business center of Ocean Beach, being given preference.

Of special importance was a lengthy communication from the U. S. Land Office at Washington, D. C., regarding surveys made of False Bay (now Mission Bay), the beach section and Pueblo lands of San Diego, the first called the Fitch survey, upon which were established American territory granted by Mexico to this country, and later the John C. Hays survey in July, 1858.

In an effort to establish a high tide and definite property line, the State of California last August commenced friendly suit, it is reported, to confirm the Hays survey Local people interested looking up this Hays survey, find it to be far from correct, as it does not meander along the bay or beach water line but cuts along in straight lines, leaving most of the property west of Bacon street as covered by a mean high tide. The Hays survey apparently is far from a correct line and would work a distinct hardship on hundreds of property owners within nearly the first two blocks of ocean frontage.

The attorney general of the State of California will be requested thru Senator Fletcher to establish the old Henry D. Fitch survey, or to have a complete new survey made by the State of California.

FRANCE AND ITALY MOBILIZE ARMIES AS CONFERENCES BEGIN AT BERLIN.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

CHANCELLOR HITLER'S virtual threats of war, though coupled with protestations of peaceful intention, are having their effect in almost every nation on earth. In his own land the result is probably one of his main objectives, for the Germans, in their loud rejoicings over the military rebirth of the reich and regaining of its old position, are losing sight of the grave economic problems which the reichsfuehrer has not yet been able to solve.

Anthony Eden

France, having decreed the enlarging of its army and the increase in the term of conscription, began moving fully half of the troops heretofore placed along the Italian frontier to the Rhine area. Premier Mussolini of Italy, as minister of war, ordered the recall of the entire military class of 1911, estimated at 220,000 men. These additions bring the strength of the army up to approximately 675,000, and when the more than 400,000 Fascist militia are included, the Italian forces number more than a million. The class of 1913, due to be dismissed soon, is being kept under arms. Mussolini made a hot speech to the nation in which he said Italy was ready "for any threat of war" and that "our desire for peace and European collaboration is based upon some millions of bayonets."

According to a Rome paper that usually speaks with authority, there will soon be held an Anglo-Franco-Italian conference to discuss the re-armament of Austria, Bulgaria, and Hungary. This has heretofore been opposed by the countries of the little entente, but it is supposed their views have been altered by recent developments.

Even in the United States the sentiment for at least adequate defense has been spurred. The senate and house conferees reached an agreement on the $400,000,000 War department appropriation bill. The house conferees receded from a proposal to give the President discretionary authority as to the rate of increasing the army's strength to 165,000 men. The senate plan providing that the increase shall begin at once was adopted. The proposed increase, recommended by the War department as necessary to bring the army up to the "least allowable minimum" was the major new provision of the bill but it represented a gain in total appropriations of more than $70,000,000 above last year.

As a preliminary to this meeting there was an important conference in Paris participated in by Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal; Fulvio Suvich, Italian under-secretary of foreign affairs; and Foreign Minister Laval of France. Laval sought to stiffen the British attitude toward Hitler, but Eden tried to turn him from his determination not to deal with Germany until the League of Nations has passed on France's protest of German violation of the Versailles treaty. It is understood France proposed to impose severe economic penalties on Germany but that Eden persuaded Laval that such measures should be delayed until they had been debated at the coming meeting of the powers at Como, Italy. This conference was postponed for some days to give Eden time to go to Moscow.

RESTRICTIONS on planting spring wheat have been removed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who fears the effect of another widespread drouth. The year's first crop report showing that farmers intend to plant 17,847,000 acres of spring wheat is said to be responsible for Wallace's about face. Last year the acreage was 18,521,000 acres. The administration is convinced that the government and farmers have a duty to protect consumers against a wheat shortage, he said. Farmers will plan an additional 900,000 to 2,300,000 acres as a result of the new order, and will harvest between ten and thirty million bushels more, Wallace estimates. Spring wheat normally constitutes about one-fourth of the nation's crop. He denied that the European situation pointing to a possibility of increased sales had anything to do with the new decision. Farmers under contract who plant their full spring wheat acreage will receive full benefit payments, but in return will be required to agree to reduce production in 1936 by the amount asked in next year's contract plus the amount they would have reduced this year. There is no indication that the corn acreage control program for 1935 will be altered.

Sec'y Wallace

THE Belcher case, regarded as the government's strongest test of NRA'S constitutionality, will be dropped, according to reports from Washington. It will be recalled that William E. Belcher, Alabama lumber mill owner, was alleged to have paid employees less than the lumber code minimum wage, and to have kept them employed eight hours a week more than the code maximum. Belcher did not deny the charges, but attacked the constitutionality of NRA legislation. He was sustained in a demurrer by Judge William Grubb, whose recent ruling that TVA may not sell power in competition with private utilities gave scant comfort to the administration. The Supreme court's decision in the Belcher case has been regarded as very important since it would go directly to the question of NRA's validity, and would make or break government control of industry.

JAPAN steps out of the League of Nations and flanked by her single avowed ally, Manchukuo, she faces the world as the self-chosen preserver of peace in the Orient. Japan's action is the culmination of a series of events started February 24, 1933, when Yosuke Matsuoka led the entire Japanese delegation in a walkout from the league assembly. Shortly after, Japan gave formal notice of her withdrawal from the league because the assembly had censured Japanese aggression in Manchuria. She has advised other powers that she considers herself guardian of peace in eastern Asia, and that outside assistance is neither desired nor invited. In addition, Japan has embarked on an armament policy marked by denunciation of the Washington naval treaty, demands for naval parity with Great Britain and the United States, and armed forces "sufficient to defend, but inadequate to attack."

HERBERT HOOVER suddenly projected himself into the political picture, and set wagging the tongues of countless politicians and observers. In a letter addressed to the California Republican assembly, meeting in Sacramento, the former President spoke his mind with utmost freedom concerning the doings of the Roosevelt administration whose theories, he asserted, "are no longer a propagandized millennium; they are self-exposed." The Republican party, said Mr. Hoover, has today the greatest responsibility that has come to it since the days of Abraham Lincoln—to raise the standard in defense of fundamental American principles; and he called for a rejuvenated and vigorous Republican organization.

Herbert Hoover

Here are some of the things Mr. Hoover said in arraigning the present administration:

"The most solemn government obligations have been repudiated.

"The nation is faced with the greatest debt ever known to our country.

"The currency has been rendered uncertain.

"The government has been centralized under an enormous bureaucracy in Washington . . . small business men have been disabled and crushed. Class conflicts have been created and embittered.

"The cost of living is steadily advancing.

"More people are dependent upon the government for relief than ever before.

"Recovery is still delayed."

Leaders of the regular Reublicans in Washington were quick to declare their approval of Mr. Hoover's attack on the New Deal. Most of them scouted the idea that he was tentatively looking toward another nomination, but the general impression was that he was in the way of becoming the leader of his party in fact as well as in name.

CONSIDERABLY mutilated, the administration's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill finally got through the senate by a vote of 68 to 16, and was returned to the house later, to be adjusted in conference. The senators accepted an amendment by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma for a currency expansion of $375,000,000 through the issuance of silver certificates at the $1.29 an ounce monetary value of the treasury's silver stocks instead of the present practice of using the purchase value of the silver. However, it was confidently expected this would be stricken out in the conference. Previously the senate rejected Senator's Wheeler's amendment for $4,000,000,000 of new currency to finance the works program.

Another amendment which was adopted was that offered by McCarran of Nevada requiring senate confirmation of all officials receiving $5,000 or more who would have charge of expenditure of the fund.

One of the efforts to specify the use of part of the huge work fund was given the approval of the flood control committee of the house. It is a bill to earmark $600,000,000 of the money for flood projects in all parts of the country, and under it about 400 projects which have been recommended by army engineers would be started.

The committee was told the list of projects called for expenditure of approximately $100,000,000 in the lower Mississippi river valley and that expenditure of $181,000,000 would "prevent the devastating floods" in that area.

BY A vote of 202 to 191, the house voted to substitute the Patman currency expansion bill for payment of the soldiers' bonus for the "sound money" plan of Representative Vinson. A boisterous house thus defied President Roosevelt's warning that he will veto immediate payment of the adjusted compensation certificates. The administration is counting on the senate sustaining the veto.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is looking ahead to 1936. Authoritative word has reached the Capitol that he wants all controversial administration legislation cleared away at this session, so that congress can meet for a short and harmonious session prior to the 1936 Presidential campaign. Besides the relief bill, Mr. Roosevelt is said to be specially anxious to have congress pass his social security program; utility holding company legislation; a bill continuing NRA for two years; transportation regulation co-ordination; banking legislation; ship subsidy and increase in the capital of the Home Owners Loan corporation. If this can be cleared from the calendar, it may prevent any serious party squabbles that might interfere with plans to bring about Roosevelt's re-election. The White House is much concerned over rumors that congress may scrap a good part of the administration's controversial legislation.

SPRING arrived in the West with a stifling dust storm which shrouded the country from eastern New Mexico to the Great Lakes. Powdered soil whipped up from the drouth-scourged prairies hid the sun, and beat relentlessly upon the senses. A dozen deaths were reported, due to suffocations, dust-induced pneumonia and traffic accidents. Freight trains were rolled to sidings, and passenger trains crept along on slow orders. Schools were closed in a number of communities in western states. Wheat prices jumped from 2 to 3¼ cents a bushel as winds cut into the dry Southwest, and Governor Landon of Kansas appealed to President Roosevelt for aid.

THE government is ready to sell gold to foreign nations that can offer an attractive proposition, Secretary Morgenthau announces. Recent sales to the Bank of Mexico and to Guatemala, Morgenthau points out, have cleared the way to similar negotiations with other countries, although he emphasized that no other transactions are being considered at this time. No conditions were attached to the transactions already consummated. In the dealings with Mexico virtually all her silver sales have been made to this country.

"We've got all the gold we can possibly use," Morgenthau added, indicating that the government would make no further undue efforts to accumulate the metal.

WITH considerable ceremony the Soviet government transferred to Japan full ownership of the Chinese Eastern railway and thus ceased to be an opposing factor in the Japanese occupation of Manchuria. In the official residence of Foreign Minister Koki Hirota in Tokyo the sale agreement and general protocol were signed and the bargain was clinched by the payment by Japan of 23,333,000 yen to the Soviet ambassador.

MUSSOLINI'S answer to the latest note on the Abyssinian situation postpones approval of the proposal that differences be decided by an international commission on conciliations "at least until the futility of direct negotiations has been proved." Il Duce made a counter-proposal suggesting that the Italian minister to Abyssinia and the Ethiopian foreign minister get together for a series of personal conferences, go over all the data, and attempt to settle the dispute without the necessity of conciliation under the direction of the League of Nations. Direct negotiations are said to have the approval of both the French and British.

Premier Mussolini

CLARENCE DARROW, foe of NRA, and author of the famous report which attacked NRA more than a year ago, assailed the administration's economic theories, including the national recovery act, in his testimony before the senate finance committee. The famous lawyer whose sharp speech and fiery courtroom tactics have made him famous, denounced NRA as playing into the hands of big business to the destruction of the "little fellow." He argued that NRA attacked the problem from the wrong angle and that the real trouble lay in faulty distribution, thus assailing the theory of scarcity. Darrow swept aside statements that NRA had helped organized labor, reduced unemployment and abolished child labor, with an assertion that it would have happened anyway. "The panic put an end to child labor," he said. "There wasn't any room for it while fathers and mothers were out of work."

The suffering due to continued concentration of wealth would have gone on anyhow, he said, but added that NRA accelerated it.

"I am not an optimist," he added. "I may be an idiot, but not a cheerful idiot."

THE federal tree planting project will get under way in North Dakota on April 15. The project has already been started in other states, but the major development of the program will be centered in North Dakota this year. The state has been assigned a quota of 600,000 trees for a belt 35 miles long. This is only a part of the operations which envisage a 100-mile wide belt of trees extending from near the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. The work started March 1 in Texas and Oklahoma, and March 15 in Kansas. Nebraska and South Dakoto projects will be started at the same time as that in North Dakota.

Created by a score of famous artisans over a period of nine years and at a cost of $435,000, the enchanted capital of fairyland soon is to be booked on a world tour for millions to see. Proceeds from exhibitions throughout the United States and abroad will be donated to hospitals for crippled children. By this means more than $1,000,000 will be realized from showings which will require a three-year schedule of bookings in every city in the United States and all foreign capitals. Constructed of aluminum and copper with fantastic angles and sky-sweeping turrets and steeples, no semblance of architectural convention is found in this giant abode of little people. Resting on the summit of a rugged precipice, the castle, which is nine feet wide and nine feet long, rises fourteen feet into the air and weighs approximately 6,000 pounds. The house, excepting rivets, contains more than 200,000 pieces, being a mechanical marvel of unprecedented intricacy, yet practicability. Equipped throughout with mechanical wonders in miniature, the house boasts of a solid golden cathedral organ standing nearly fifteen inches high, which plays through an elaborate electrical system via remote control. Miss Moore's famous doll house also has the world's smallest electric light bulbs, each being the size of a grain of wheat and imbedded in sockets with the circumference of pinheads, in a golden chandelier, strung with glittering, pear-shaped diamonds. The doll house, wired with an electrical system requiring months of labor and experimentation, is controlled with a series of transformers and switches for each room. All lighting, with the exception of flood-lighting in the gardens, is indirect, with more than 400 small-watt bulbs being utilized in the system. Water tanks on turrets and in the dungeons of the castle feed live fountains in the kitchen, garden and bathrooms. The tanks, on emptying, play beautiful chimes in the steeples every ten minutes automatically. Operated by electricity, a magic feathered nightingale perches on a lavender glass tree in the Garden of Aladdin and sings full-throated, joyful tunes. The doll's house contains eleven rooms, Aladdin's Magic garden and Noah's entrance hall. The furnishings throughout the house represent years of effort in collecting in every part of the world. They are in scale an inch to the foot and are probably the most priceless in existence. Photograph shows the prince's bedroom in Colleen Moore's doll house.

Bedtime Story for Children

WHAT DANNY MEADOW MOUSE DID

TO GRANDFATHER FROG, watching from the safety of the Smiling Pool, it seemed that Danny Meadow House hadn't the least chance in the world. There he was on the bank of the Smiling Pool with water in front of him and Reddy Fox creeping up right behind him. To try to run back would be to run right into Reddy's mouth. There wasn't a place for Danny to hide.

"I told Danny he was foolish to come over here," muttered Grandfa

So Danny Swam With All His Might for the Other Bank of the Smiling Pool.

ther Frog. "I'm rather fond of the little fellow, and I hate to think that I shall never see him again."

Grandfather Frog saw Reddy start to spring on Danny Meadow Mouse and closed his big, goggly eyes so that he would not see the dreadful end of Danny. He expected to hear Danny's last despairing squeak, but instead he heard a splash. Grandfather Frog's big, goggly eyes flew open, and then he gave a grunt of surprise. On the bank where Danny had been a second before was Reddy Fox, and if ever there was an angry and disappointed Fox, that one was Reddy. And there in the Smiling Pool itself was Danny Meadow Mouse swimming straight out toward the middle as if he were quite as much at home in the water as his big cousin, Jerry Muskrat himself.

From the way he was headed it was quite clear that Danny intended to swim across the Smiling Pool to the other bank. "Chugarum!" exclaimed Grandfather Frog. "Chugarum! Bravo, Danny Meadow Mouse! Bravo!"

Danny made no reply. He was too busy. He couldn't waste his breath talking. Besides, he was afraid he would swallow some water and choke. So he kept right on swimming as hard as ever he could. The truth is, Danny was in a hurry to reach the other bank. While he wasn't afraid of the water, he was afraid of certain folks who live in the water. He knew that Snapper, the great, big Snapping Turtle lives in the Smiling Pool, and that nothing would make him happier than a fat meadow mouse for his dinner. Then Danny couldn't help but think of Billy Mink. If Billy Mink should happen along, well, Danny didn't like to think of it. You see, Billy Mink is also fond of fat meadow mice.

So Danny swam with all his might for the other bank of the Smiling Pool. There were some little holes in that bank where he would feel quite safe. As for Reddy Fox, he looked both foolish and angry. You see, Reddy had felt absolutely sure of that Meadow Mouse dinner. As it was he wouldn't even get a frog dinner, for, at the warning of Redwing the Blackbird, all the young frogs along the edge of the Smiling Pool had dived for safety.

Growth of Fishes

The growth of fishes probably decelerates with age, but under favorable circumstances it never stops. If fish growth were shown on a graph, the weight curve would show a steady upward line, but the length curve would ascend rapidly at first, then almost straighten out. That is because as the fish grows large, the corresponding increase in girth tends to make the weight increase rather constant.—Detroit Free Press.

Parisians Take Their Tea in a Stable

A NOVEL tea shop has been set up in a stable on a farm situated near the Bois de Boulogne in Paris that is proving quite popular with the ladies of the smart set. A large pane of glass is all that separates the tea drinkers, who seem to prefer the fresh milk to the tea, from the stables and if they wish they may try their hand at milking the cows.

YOU AND I TOGETHER

By ANNE CAMPBELL

YOU and I together
Have shared adversity.
Our faith has tumbled mountains
Of care into the sea.
We've faced small tribulations
With laughter in each heart;
But what has life to offer
For you and me, apart?

You and I together
Are strong to conquer Fate,
But separate, how stony
The path to heaven's gate!
I do not fear life's sorrows,
But I should miss the start,
And never reach the hilltop,
With you and me, apart!

QUESTION BOX by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I am a man twenty-four years of age and extremely bashful. I am madly in love with a girl my own age and would like to marry her, but I am too bashful to even broach the subject. I will never get over my bashfulness, and do not know what to do. Can you give me an idea that will help me?

Yours truly,
O. B. O'GOSH.

Answer: The next time you call on her get the conversation switched around to the different kinds of drinks there are in the world. Then each of you take turns asking each other which drink you prefer. Now you're all set. When she asks you: "Do you like tea," turn to her and say: "Yes, but I like the next letter better."

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I went to the circus yesterday, and in one of the side shows there was a skeleton of a horse. The man said it was the skeleton of a horse that was ridden by "Richard the Third." I am a student of Shakespeare and I was surprised at this, as I always understood he didn't have a horse; in fact, he offered his kingdom for a horse. What do you think of the situation?

Yours truly,
ELLA PHANT.

Answer: Very simple. The skeleton you saw is of the horse he offered his kingdom for.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I am a young and rather attractive looking blond girl. I am in love and go with a handsome boy about my own age. He is a professional baseball player. My mother says it is wrong for me to go with a baseball player, as he is in a wicked business. Is this true?

Sincerely,
A. FOUL.

Answer: Tell your mother baseball is not wicked. If she looks in the Bible she will read: "Rebecca took a pitcher to the well."

TO KEEP GLORY OF GRECIAN ART

Steps for Preservation of the Acropolis.

Warned by a large landslide that the walls of the Acropolis are weakening, modern Athens is planning to reinforce with new buttresses the north and east walls of this ruin-crowned plateau which dominates the city.

It will be aeons before mere weather fissures can destroy this time-defying collection of ruins, which has survived the attacks of barbarians, gunpowder and lightning, according to the National Geographic society.

Although greatly changed from the once magnificent temples with delicately colored friezes above glistening columns, the remaining edifices on the Acropolis still awe the beholder into contemplation of the days when this plateau was covered with the most beautiful art of Greek antiquity.

The Acropolis of Athens looms beside the modern city as a rugged limestone plateau, approximately 1,000 by 500 feet. About 512 feet above sea level, it is an excellent vantage point. From it one can look across busy Athens' white houses, vineyards and groves of figs and olives to the encircling purple hills, scarred with white gashes of marble quarries, and far beyond them to the glittering blue Aegean sea.

Partly girdled by strong walls, the Acropolis afforded splendid protection to early Athenians fleeing from land invaders and pirates. Two parallel "long walls," built about 250 yards apart and approximately 60 feet high, insured communication at all times with Piraeus, approximately six miles away, which, then as now, was Athens' harbor and a source of food supply. In return for the protection of the Acropolis, grateful Athenians erected on it temples and statues sacred to Athena Polias, "guardian of the state."

Between 445 B. C. and 431 B. C. the Acropolis was at the height of its grandeur. While a treaty held the restless Spartans at bay, the esthetic ruler, Pericles, commissioned the sculptor Phidias to beautify the sanctuary.

The Acropolis in its full glory must have been tremendously impressive. One ascended to it through a stately marble gate-house, the Propylaea. There, within a short compass, stood the sanctuary of Artemis, and the delicate airy-looking temple of Athena Victory. The Erechtheum, with the roof of its porch supported lightly on the erect heads of marble dancing girls, was not completed until later.

Crowning the summit of the Acropolis loomed the Parthenon, with seventeen strong, simple columns on each side, eight at each end. To view its lonely ruins drenched in moonlight is to realize why it has been considered the "most majestic of man's architectural achievements."

HARD FOR LIP READERS

Deaf students of a Madison avenue school of lip reading are told at the start to watch not only the lips but the tongue, throat muscles and the expression of the entire face. There are many problems. Thirteen word look, on the lips, like "bad" ("man, "mad," "band," etc.); twelve look exactly like "fade" ("vein," "feigned," etc.); "juice," "chews," and "shoes" look alike, and so do "honor" and "otter" (although you can be fairly sure that it's "honor").

We were interested to learn that the word "king" is the hardest word to lip-read in the English language: the "k" and the "ng" are deep in the throat, and the short "i" hardly moves the lips at all. Men's lips are harder to read than women's, because men's lips are less flexible.—The New Yorker.

BILLBOARD REFORM.

We still have the billboard menace with us. Before the depression, $75,000,000 were invested annually in this enterprise in the United States, but since then, up to last year these figures have been reduced to $30,000,000. Over 200,000 billboards are scattered over the nation's sightly landscape, representing an investment of over $25,000,000.

The billboard menace seems to have taken possession of California's most beautiful and scenic highways. A campaign is on, however, to clear up a lot of illegal signs under the law passed last year by the State Legislature. The law covers all objectionable signs and may be enforced without delay. Outdoor advertising companies claim that the law has their support even though it adds to the cost of doing business. A spokesman explained that it has forced no one out of business, and that many objectionable features of advertising are being curbed by means of its enforcement.

THE YEAR OF ECLIPSE

March departed this year with a record of being the coldest month in over four years. There has been some ideal days in March, nevertheless, for the sun shone intermittently with the usual Golden glow of warmth. The official record places the average temperature at 37 degrees for the month, which is 13 degrees lower than last year. This all may be the result of this being an exceptional year for eclipse. Students of astronomy discover that this will be the banner year for eclipse of the sun—the greatest number in 130 years before. The sun and moon together are on the program for seven eclipse. The moon will pass between the sun and the earth five times and the moon will be in the earth's shadow twice; but here is the disappointing feature, that only two eclipse will be visible in the United States. A total eclipse of the moon will be visible over the entire United States on July 16.

The last total eclipse of the sun visible in the United States was Aug. 31, 1932, and there will not be another seen in this country until 1945. The professors of astronomy are keeping a strict check-up of Old Sol and maneuvers; they tell us that not since 1805 have the sun's rays been uartially blotted from the earth so many times; that this year it will be the second time for five solar eclipses in one year since 1255 and there will not be another such number until 2485

The London Times has been in exsitence for 150 years, and that is a long time for the life of any continuous newspaper. United States of America, is rapidly on the way with some illustrious pioneers in the journaltistic, field, well beyond the century mark. The London Times has been a good example of newspaper dare and bravery in asserting its freedom against kings and potentates. It has made a gallant fight for freedom and independence. It was the first great European newspaper to discover that it owed its allegiance to the public and not to princes or politicians. It demopstrated that to succeed, a real newspaper must not be a servile tool of government, but must express the independent opinion of the qualified men who served it as editors.

The Lenten season is about over and on Friday, the 19th, will be the climax of endurance, when the suffering and anguish over humanity was ended on the cross. It is Good Friday, and for a few hours, the darkest moments the world ever knew. Then came the triumph followed by the empty tomb. Lenten has been a special devoted duty highly observed this year. People have turned to its observance, because of material loss, mental and physical disturbance, and unrest. Lenten this year has pointed millions to a better course of living; it has shown the way to many drifting, dissatisfied, worried people, who see a different future ahead—the only hope for them.

Huey Long and General Johnson are desperate in their personal attacks toward each other. They are neither eloquent nor particular in their use of words, but show pitted spite with a sole purpose of winning over the other by the hardest cutting speech. Men who have achieved prominenet in the public eye, as these two have, it would seem, should care for higher ideals than stooping to small gossip to "get even." It is really the serious minded, who grow great in the hearts of the masses; but evidently they have little regard as to the manner in which they seek a name. Such political zealots usually are the first forgotten after they finish their life race.

We are told that he who wants little always has enough. This would be a commendable asset to millions who are burdened with a load of discouragements. It is worthy of repeating, that such a desire as given above s not far from contentment under all circumstances and is proof that happiness consists not in possessing much, but in being content wth what we possess. Some spend nearly a lifetime learning wih regret this age-old truth after it is almost too late to redeem themselves before society.

THE ESOTERIC EASTER

What have eggs, colored or otherwise to do with the festival of Easter? "Every living thing springs from an egg" be it small or be it great. The egg, therefore, is a symbol of the resurrection of life. Thus sending an egg was a symbolic message which was meant to say "Brother, with this gift of an egg, symbol of new life to be, I hope that you will soon break the infolding 'egg' of the lower self and may step forth as the Master within.

Peas May Be Green, But —

PEAS may be green—in fact they should be, if they are fresh young things—but they have had sufficient social experience to appear at the most sophisticated parties and in the most sophisticated dishes.

If you are a modern hostess and believe in adding a few smart dishes to your culinary list, every month perhaps, so that your meals never get into a rut, you will want to keep plenty of canned peas on hand. Order them in the various sizes, both can sizes and pea sizes, so that they will be adapted to your various needs.

Party Peas

The following suggestion for a pea dish has been selected with an eye to both vogue and "good taste." It is yours for better parties.

Pea Puff with Pineapple: Drain the contents of one No. 2 can of peas, reserving the liquor, and press through a sieve. Make a thick white sauce of four tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, one cup of milk and then add the pea pulp. Season to taste with salt and pepper, add three well-beaten egg yolks and fold in the three stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour into a buttered baking dish and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven—350 to 375 degrees—until set and a delicate brown. It will take about twenty-five to thirty minutes. While baking, cook two tablespoons butter and one cup of crushed canned pineapple together until thick and rich. Spread this over the baked puff and serve at once. This serves eight persons.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

An unusually interesting meeting is promised at the Theosophical Headquarters on Point Loma next Sunday afternoon at 3 when Marjorie M. Tyberg and Boris de Zirkoff will together occupy the platform for the discussion of the subject: "Revolution by Evolution". Both of the speakers are favorites with local audiences. Mrs. Tyberg is chairman of the editorial committee in charge of the four periodicals issued by Theosophical University Press. She will make the principal address and will be assisted in answering questions by Boris de Zirkoff, brilliant young scholar who always holds the attention of his audiences. Incidentally, he is one of the few surviving blood-relatives of H. P. Blavatsky, the principal founder of the Theosophical Society in 1875.

Says Mrs. Tyberg: "The changes that have made the world a better and happier place in which to live had their origin in ideas. The ideal in time becomes the actual. Imagination, aspiration, constructive thinking, can generate new institutions, new activities. Our time calls for a statement of a larger, more inclusive, more significant purpose to give direction to ideas and sentiments, and to enable us to build wisely a new future. This Theosophy supplies."

Citrus Sales Boosted Over Whole Nation

With California's 1935 citrus crop the largest in history and running fifteen million boxes above last year, groups interested in helping the grower have united in a giant nation-wide drive, April 19th to 25th to help relieve the surplus.

Nearly one hundred thousand dollars will be spent in advertising citrus fruit during the week—making one of the most concentrated campaigns ever placed behind a California farm product. Newspapers, magazines, trade publications, electric signs, outdoor postings, and car cards will be used.

Plans for the citrus fruit drive were originated by Safeway Stores, Inc., as a part of the grocery company's "Grower-Consumer" program, in which modern advertising and merchandising methods are given an opportunity to show what they can do toward farm relief. The California Fruit Growers Exchange immediately arranged to cooperate, and was followed by other organizations in the field.

California oranges, lemons, and grapefruit will be featured in more than three thousands stores of the Safeway organization thruout the country during the week of the drive. Health benefits and the heavy juice qualities of the fruit will be stressed in the advertising.

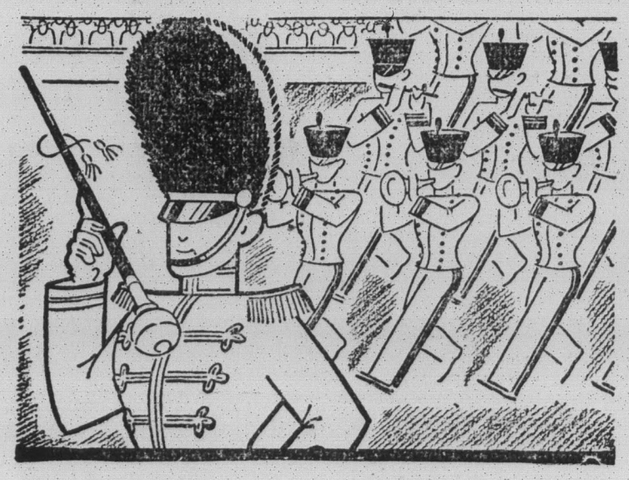
Better Breakfasts



IS your breakfast a builder-upper? It should be. It should do for you what the band-leader who prances about between halves at the football game does for the spirit of the crowds. It should build you up to get the most zest out of the day.

Plan, first of all, variety in your breakfasts. Consider foods which are energy-giving and delicacies which are most awfully good. See that your coffee is not just something-in-a-cup but the best possible cup of coffee. Buy it vacuum-packed so that it will be fresh and full-flavored and then brew it with exactness—and enthusiasm. Here is a build-up menu:

Apricot and Grapefruit Compote
Cereal with Cream
Eggs Poached in Milk on Wholewheat Toast
Honey in the Comb
Coffee

Apricot and Grapefruit Compote: Cut one cup of canned apricots in quarters and one cup of canned grapefruit in pieces suitable for serving. Add the apricot and grapefruit syrups and the juice from one orange. Chill overnight. This compote serves five persons.*

AMERICAN LEGION

OCEAN BEACH POST NO. 433 and AUXILIARY

Legionaires and auxiliary members take notice: Beginning this month Thursday, April 18th, we will stage once again another of those delightful get-together parties for our own members and from the rumors your commander has been hearing it will be in the nature of a real surprise planned by the ladies of the auxiliary, with a bunch of brand new games and of course some real eats, so if any of you miss it, it will be just your tough luck. Come prepared for a good time and once more get better acquainted with your comrades and their wives. The monthly card parties have been a real success but due to other organizations holding meetings or parties on the third Thursday of each month we have not had the attendance we would have liked so have decided to hold ours on the third Saturday night of each month and the next one will be Saturday April 20, at which time there will be some wonderful prizes awarded along with the chances on the big Rhode Island Red capon rooster.

Now comrades don't forget these dates, Thursday April 18 for all legionnaires and their wives and the card party Saturday April 20 to which the entire community is invited. Come support the post so that it can continue to carry on its welfare and community betterment programs for the beach.

WARREN WALKER SCHOOL

The students of the Warren-Walker school have been making scrap-books during their art classes for the sick children of the Red Cross. They have mounted magazine pictures of flowers, animals, seasons, airplanes, cars and ships on card board and covered them with gaily colored cloth and paper. It is the hope of each student that his book will help to make some patient cheerful.

The girls of the eighth grade have been having cooking lessons Monday mornings in the school kitchen. They assist in preparing a light lunch. They have learned to make cream sauce and salads and also have learned how to prepare vegetables and soup.

The school was glad to welcome two new students Monday morning. Patsy Chamberlin of Deering, Alaska and Charles Dixon of Sunset Cliffs were enrolled in the kindergarten class.

GOODWILL INDUSTRIES EXPO EXHIBIT NEARLY READY

The proposed Goodwill exhibit at the Exposition is nearing completion and will be installed by the opening day, reports Rev. Myron Insko, of Ocean Beach, the superintendent of the San Diego Goodwill Industries. He states also that the past month has been the best March the local organization has known in the amount of wages paid, the excess being 56% as compared with the previous highest March figures. A total of 130 different persons was employed during the month. They put in 7554 hours of labor.

Despite this very successful month's work, many men are being turned away almost daily, he reports, for lack of materials or articles upon the renovation of which Goodwill gives employment. More filled Goodwill bags will enable the organization to extend its efforts to a larger number of self-respecting workers who seek "Not Charity but a Chance".

Firemen-Policemen Request Is Reasonable

"They attain no fortunes; they achieve no monuments, yet without their watchful service, no citizen could lay down to untroubled sleep." So reads a tribute paid to San Diego's police officers and firemen, whose record of public service is outstanding for efficiency and economy. They always answer when we call . . . now they need us, so let us unite to the man and woman in support of city charter amendments one, two, three, four and five, and vote a record-breaking plurality for these measures which will insure the police and firemen and their dependants, deserving pensions, writes a prominent civic leader.

"Voting for amendments one, two, three, four, and five will help the police and firemen to help themselves. The vital need of a pension fund for police and firemen is obvious. San Diego's public service records are crowded with instances of police and firemen paying the supreme sacrifice to safeguard the lives and protect the property of the citizenry.

"Taxpayers should understand that they will not foot the entire pension bill. From the monthly pay check of each police officer and fireman will be deducted an amount for the general pension fund. Citizens ask that the city match this sum. When the pension fund reaches an adequate total, then the city's support immediately stops. Detailed study of other cities pension fund programs assures the proposed amendments of being sound, just and in the best interests of everyone concerned."

Our Weekly Bible Lesson.

(From The Sermon on the Mount—The Book of Matthew.)

WHY BE ANXIOUS ?
Matthew 6—24-27

24. No man can serve two masters: for he either will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. 25. Therefore I say unto you. Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? 26. Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet our heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? 27. Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" This question is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

A Scriptural selection includes these verses from I John: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life; . . . that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ . . . This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "We are sometimes led to believe that darkness is as real as light; but Science affirms darkness to be only a mortal sense of the absence of light, at the coming of which darkness loses the appearance of reality. So sin and sorrow, disease and death, are the suppositional absence of Life, God, and flee as phantoms of error before truth and love."

Extreme Chic in This Frock

PATTERN 9986

If you've been following the latest trend in style news, you know that the classic shirtwaist frock is still one of Fashion's pets. And here's a delightful version of it. The sleeves and shoulders are cut in one to give a nice smooth line, and make them easy as a, b, c to fit. The bodice with a trim slot-pleat at the back to match the chic of its buttoned front closing is smartly gathered to the yoke—the long skirt seams end in jaunty inverted pleats—and the patch pockets follow the latest mode by being rounded instead of square. Make it of a rough crepe and put an impudent little contrasting bow at the throat for added chic!

Pattern 9986 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39 inch fabric.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

He smiled at Dawn and then at Ben and for the life of him Elliott could think of nothing adequate to say for an instant. When he did speak, he said levelly:

"In a lady's house the only thing to do is to reply in kind. Isn't that true?"

The other bowed slightly, but his eyes did not meet Elliott's.

"I'm glad you are so generous," he said and probably only Ben caught the mockery in the tone. "Am I too late for tea, Dawn?"

Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, watched this with grimly set lips. Dawn replied that Brandon was only just in time and Ben, picking up his cap and coat, prepared to go.

"You were talking of dances," he said to Dawn. "There's one on the cards for Saturday night, I'm told. Would you mind going with a mere employee?"

Her face lighted. "Mind! I'd love it!" she said and the honest enthusiasm in her voice caused Nicholas Brandon to look at her sharply.

"Saturday night, then. Good-day, Mr. Brandon," — with that challenging smile. He turned to the woman in the doorway. "Good-by. I guess I'll have to call you Aunt Em. That's the only name I know you by!"

As Ben passed out beneath the hemlocks and turned into the street, amazed at Brandon's manner, he brushed against a man who, he thought afterwards, must have been standing there. In the twilight he could not be certain but he believed that he had never seen that heavily bearded face before. He looked over his shoulder later to see the man, who had started on in the opposite direction, return and pass slowly before Dawn McManus' home again.

CHAPTER VIII

Nicholas Brandon was a man of forty-five. He was rich, he was powerful, he had achieved much of what he held to be desirable.

But his experience had been empty of things that most men crave above all else. He had not seen Dawn McManus in three years until she came back to Tincup that November. He had known her always. He had watched her grow from infant to child; from child to a wistful, shy girl, living under the cloud of her father's tragic disappearance; but the transition from girlhood to womanhood had been made during her longest absence from the town that had been her only home. And so when he saw her, after her arrival, instead of the young girl he remembered, toward whom he had always been gentle and kind while he sought to pilfer her heritage, he encountered a lovely, compelling young woman. She charmed him, stirred in his heart long neglected and now twisted and distorted wants which, given liberty in his youth, might have been fine and open and clean. He wanted Dawn McManus as he never had wanted anything before.

Slowly a clear understanding of that desire struggled through to his consciousness. In the beginning it was only an unidentified, disturbing urge but when the realization finally took shape he proceeded deliberately and methodically toward the formulation of a plan, as was his way in attaining any goal.

He saw Dawn frequently, dropping in to visit briefly in passing, taking her in his cutter on a drive to a camp once, casually asking her to do this or that with him. But he could not interest her despite his persistent efforts, and now another element was injected into the situation. When he encountered Ben Elliott that afternoon in friendly conversation with Dawn it required all his resourcefulness to retain a show of self-control. Inwardly he seethed with a hatred which now had the element of jealousy for an embittering alloy. He hated Ben Elliott with all his soul and mingled with his passion for Dawn McManus was a species of hate as well. He hated her for her cleanliness, for her sweetness, for her power to attract young men to her.

A double motive impelled him, thereafter, to plot and scheme and strive to possess the Hoot Owl. Without that timber and the tidy fortune it might some day represent Dawn would be without resources. And a girl without property, he believed, would be easy prey.

But complications rose to stir his ire and chagrin. And so this night—it was very late—he sat in his office, with Lydia on the other side of his flat-topped desk.

Lydia. Just that. She needed no other name for identification in Tincup. The women who, with her, occupied that short and bleak and isolated row of houses across the tracks—Section Thirty-Seven, it was called by the town—needed none but a given name. He had summoned her and she had come according to instructions, furtively and alone, long after the rest of the town slept.

She sat, a bit tight lipped, her button eyes on Brandon's face, and listened to him talk, crisply and incisively. The man finished, calm and assured in his dictatorship and from his manner he might have been issuing an order to a subordinate which had to do with a commonplace detail of his business affairs. But after he had stopped the woman leaned just a bit further forward.

"It's a rotten deal!" she said in a quick, nervous manner. "Why, she's only a girl, Brandon; and the boy, he's as clean as a hound's tooth. It's rotten!"

Brandon shrugged and looked away.

"I don't care to be mixed up in this," she went on. "I don't fancy playing any such game."

Defiance was there, and it struck the man's temper. His dark eyes swung back to focus on her face and about his lips was the beginning of a malicious smile.

"You refuse?"

"If I do, what?"

He leaned quickly against the desk edge.

"One word to the immigration people and you go back to Canada. Do you think they forget . . . the Canadians?"

Lydia blinked rapidly and bit her lips.

"You wouldn't turn me up!" she said sharply.

Brandon leaned back, laughing comfortably.

"Wouldn't I, though! Wouldn't I? If you refuse . . . Try it, my friend, and then try Canada's memory. You've been safe from their law for three years. In twelve hours I could and would toss you to them and have the satisfaction of a duty done."

For a moment they sat in silence. Then Lydia spoke with a bitter shake of her head.

"I know when I'm licked," she said crisply. "It's rotten; a foul blow . . . but I'll have to go through with it, it seems!" She rose, and her breath was somewhat quick.

"But some day, Nick Brandon, you'll slip! For years, as I get it, you've had others carry your dirt for you. Remember, the time will come when this power you feel so sure about will crumble! The time will come when you'll have no one to turn to, no one to threaten into fighting your fights for you! I wonder . . . what'll you do then?"

"That," he said easily, "is distinctly my own affair."

CHAPTER IX

It was Saturday night and Tincup was dancing. In the Odd Fellows hall a violin, a cornet and a piano made music for the scores who had paid their fee and danced in the glaring, barren room. And among them, a cynosure for all eyes, went Ben Elliott and Dawn McManus.

It was the first time many of the townspeople had had a real good look at Dawn since her return; it was Ben Elliott's initial encounter with a social function in Tincup; it was their first appearance in public together. Curiosity prompted much of the neck craning because Dawn, the daughter of Denny McManus, always had been a conspicuous figure, but now her loveliness was heightened by a flush and both men and women forgot that she was known chiefly as the daughter of a murderer.

Ben, dressed in a decently fitting business suit instead of the woods clothing in which they had always seen him, looked even more youthful than usual.

The two were apparently having the time of their lives. Ben talked. How he talked! He talked of this, that, the other thing constantly. He felt he must talk and keep talking of impersonal matters or he would find himself blurting words of love into Dawn's ear, there in a public dance hall. He felt that unless he kept talking of trivial things he would find himself shouting:

"You are the most lovely thing that ever breathed and I love you, love you, love you!"

So he seized upon every subject that came into his head eagerly, almost desperately.

Now he was telling her of the new bookkeeper he had hired the day before.

"Queer fellow, in a way. Seems to be capable of a much better job than keeping books for the Hoot Owl. I've guessed at booze, disastrous family experience and any number of things, but none seems to fit him. At first I was a little leary of letting him into the office and had him in the mill a couple of days but, gee, you can't let a man who's certainly a high grade office hand do work like that!

"I brought him in and told him I needed a bookkeeper but had just had one experience with a man that made me a little jumpy. I had a boy out there who was a little light fingered. He didn't get away with anything, luckily.

"But I told Martin—John Martin his name is—that I was going to put him on the books if he'd take the job with the understanding that I was going to suspect him of a lot of things for a long time. He gave me one of the funniest looks I've ever seen and said he wasn't afraid to be suspected.

"So there he is. We're in the new office, now. He and I each have a little room just big enough for a bed and I like him a lot."

"I Should Think You'd Be Ashamed of Yourself!"

The dance ended and they walked toward vacant chairs and were so occupied with one another that they did not notice the hush that had fallen over the place, nor the woman who had entered until she had crossed the floor and stopped before them.

Lydia stood peering through the ranks of onlookers that clustered about the doorway until the floor was cleared. Then, with a short, imperative word, she shouldered her way through and into the room.

She stopped just within the threshold and shook the light snow from her fur coat and that gesture was enough to cause words to die in the throats of those who saw. Lydia, here! Lydia, from Thirty-Seven, invading this place where decent people, where good men and women and little children, were assembled!

The woman did not hesitate. Head up, intently, she crossed the floor straight toward Ben Elliott who, eyes fast on Dawn to miss no change in her mobile face, still talked with animation, unaware of the hush about them.

He did not stop talking until the woman's shadow fell upon him. Then he looked up, saw her and rose.

He rose because a woman was standing there, evidently waiting to speak to him. He did not know her; had never seen her before. He had no time to observe and judge. He would have risen, anyhow, because he was naturally courteous to women. He did more than rise. He even bowed just a trifle when he saw that her eyes were so fast on him. He did not notice that Dawn started, that one hand lifted quickly to her cheek.

Lydia's voice sounded sharp and hard and rasping in the silence.

"I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself!" she said.

Ben had started to smile, but this changed to a frown of perplexity.

"Ashamed, ma'am?" he asked. "Why, I—"

"Yes; ashamed! There's that poor girl in my house, sick and crying for days! You brought her here, didn't you? You're the one who got her to come to Tincup. And now, when she needs you, you won't come near her!"

Ben looked at Dawn, who was shrinking back in her chair; at other people whose faces reflected incredulity or vicarious guilt or fright.

"Ma'am, I . . . That is, I don't understand you," he stammered.

His eyes were taking her in, now, from her costly fur coat to the emerald earrings, and the hardness of her eyes; and, as in a daze, he classified her, put her in the shameful niche which was hers. A great flush of bewilderment swept into his face.

"Don't understand!" Lydia laughed harshly. "I'll say you understand! Maybe you think you can abuse a girl like that and get away with it in this town, but not while she's in my house, you can't!"

A wave of humiliation overwhelmed Ben. What could a man do in a situation like this? What could he say? He was fouled, outmatched. Nothing in his experience stood him in stead to meet such an emergency as this one.

"Why . . . Why, this is an outrage," he began weakly. But his fighting spirit surged upward, steadied him. "I've never seen you in my life! I don't even know what you're talking about! This is either a mistake or—"

"Mistake!" the woman cried shrilly. "Don't try to get away with that! I suppose it does surprise you to have me find you here! But you've kept out of sight, dodged me and—"

"Stop!" he thundered. "Stop it, I say!"

For an instant his conviction checked her. Movement was going on about them, people shifting to see and hear better, one man mounting a chair. The crowd by the doorway had turned back to him after watching Dawn McManus scurry down the stairs. But Elliott was unaware of all this.

"There's no stopping me now, Elliott! I've come to show you up—"

"You've come to make trouble on a foundation of lies!" he said and stepped closer to her.

His face was drawn and pale, now, jaws set, and his eyes flared dangerously.

"This is some outrageous plot," he said evenly, and so low that only those nearest him could hear. "This is done deliberately to give me a black eye before these people here! You're a party to a filthy scheme, whoever you are!"

"Fine words, Elliott! Fine words! But this girl's tears and misery are on your head and if you won't help her, I will. She goes back where she came from tomorrow!"

With that she turned and, self-composed, almost proud in her bearing, crossed the floor. Ben watched her go until she had disappeared down the stairway. Then he faced about, wondering what he could say to Dawn McManus, but she was not there.

His face went blank in amazement, bewilderment.

"She ducked out," a man whispered and the sound carried through the room.

Gone! Fled because she believed this woman? His heart went cold but he gathered himself and stalked out of the hall.

Brandon, alone in his office, drank deeply from a whisky bottle. Then, on a telegraph pad scrawled an Ontario address. The message itself consisted of but two words:

"Send Red."

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested and finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames, discovers the fire was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer of spot cash for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time limit is set. Ben meets Dawn McManus and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract, is blown up. By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

Finds "Fascination" by Snakes Is Another Myth

Especially remarkable is the current belief that snakes have the power to "fascinate" or exert hypnotic influence over their victims. It is possible that absence of eyelids and consequent inability to close the eyes may be partly responsible for this fetish; the creature's sinuous movements and habit of probing the ground with its forked tongue may perhaps further encourage the common superstition.

That the snake has from early times exerted a very powerful psychological influence over the imaginative mind of man there can be no doubt whatever. One has but to recall the grotesque story of the hoop snake or the American Indian's belief that the rattlesnake adds a joint to its rattle every time it takes a human life.

The actual "fascinating" power of the snake over intended victims has been disproved by many carefully conducted experiments. Many years ago, when it was customary to feed the zoo's snakes in public on living rats, mice, etc., it was usual to see such small animals contentedly feeding or cleaning themselves within a few inches of the reptiles, says E. C. Boulenger in the London Observer.

Invented Original Telegraph

Samuel Morse, the American who invented the original telegraph apparatus, obtained a patent in France; but this was afterwards appropriated by the French government without compensation to the inventor. Eventually he returned to America, and the first telegram was transmitted from Baltimore to Washington in 1844. The original Morse apparatus recorded the dots and dashes on a moving tape, but when it was discovered that messages could be read by sound alone, the tape was abolished and a speeding up of transmission and reception was effected. Even an experienced Morse operator could only deal with 40 to 50 average-length telegrams an hour.

The "liquid test"

...it ENDS bowel worries for many people

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change. If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. Ask your doctor about this! (Doctors use liquid laxatives.) You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a most dependable liquid laxative, at any drug store.

It's surprising how many of us have heartburn. Hurry through breakfast to catch the 8:15, quick lunch at a soda fountain, confining work with lots of cigarettes all day. When your stomach goes on a strike, the doctor will say "too much acid," and to try Milnesia Wafers. Take one every night and you won't have any further stomach distress.

THE "NORMAL CHILD"

The conception of the "inner nature" of the child in progressive education is actually so idealistic that it is entirely unfair to most normal boys and girls. For it assumes quite blandly that the average child is by his very nature intelligent, talented, self-reliant, reasonable and sociably inclined. That he has within himself the ability to make logical judgments and form sensible opinions. But the sad and sober truth is that the average healthy child has very few of these essentially adult traits of mind and character.

The average child is selfish, he is stubborn, he is forgetful, he is cruel, he is illogical. His sense of humor is of an extremely low variety. And his inherent taste, judged by civilized adult standards, is rather atrocious.

The child is like this not because he has been poorly trained or badly conditioned or harshly repressed, but simply because he is a normal child. —Dr. Grace Adams in Scribner's Magazine.

EIGHT EL CENTRO KIWANIANS VISIT HERE

Tuesday evening at Loma Tavern President Ray C. Clemons of El Centro Kiwanis club together with seven of his members visited the Ocean Beach club enjoyed a splendid dinner meeting. The other members of the club were Dunbar Gary, J. P. Eyer, E. Mason, Roscoe Heil, John DuBois, Gordon Scriven and S. C. Scouller.

Sam Dunaway, Pacific Beach druggist, was guest speaker and told of early days in Imperial valley where he went in 1906 and saw the building of the valley, the trials and tribulations encountered in bringing water and fertility to the lands, and other interesting facts new to most of his audience. Dunaway said the valley was known of by white trappers back to 1825 but that the desert lay in its natural state until Chas. Rockwood, a far-visioned engineer started its development from waters of the Colorado river. On May 10, 1901, the first waters were turned from the river by levees which later broke many times and the California Development Co. struggled along until 1906, meeting many setbacks, and a flood at that time broke the concern, however, the Southern Pacific R. R. Co. and the government, with Theodore Roosevelt, became interested and real development began. The valley in 1906 was a part of San Diego county but there was no road over the mountain to the west and a trip to the county seat meant a trip north to nearly Los Angeles and then back to San Diego. In 1907 this condition called for the creation of Imperial county. Steady development has followed and each year the crops of the valley become more valuable and this one garden spot of the world has become widely known in all America as well as in foreign countries. With the continued control of Colorado river waters, floods and drouths will vanish, and Imperial valley indeed will be a favored spot.

Mrs. J. W. Wilhoit and Harold Kimball were guests of Dr. Wilhoit, Mrs. Restine and Mrs. Claspill guests of their Kiwanian husbands.
